

A NOTE FROM RABBI VALERIE

"God's dream is ...to have humanity as a partner in the drama of continuous creation."
-Abraham Joshua Heschel

Two years ago, I was on Sabbatical. Probably the most profound experience in those two months was my trip to Israel. Just being in Israel is meaningful, and words are inadequate to describe what happens when you arrive: feelings and thoughts expand, senses are heightened, everything is just more intense. I traveled with a group of rabbis, and our tour was focused on the thriving arts and culture landscape in Israel. It was breathtaking.

I don't know if the trip inspired what happened next or being stuck at home or the need to fill an empty space that this time of isolation had cracked open, but I began to make art. And I'm still creating.

The Jewish People have always been creators, and our creations have expressed both religious and secular messages. Our earliest artistic expression was the written word, the majestic poetry and prose of the Bible and the linguistic aerobatics of rabbinic literature. The first Jewish craftsman was Betzalel who designed the Temple, and Miriam was our first choreographer leading the women dancing at the Red Sea. David played the harp and wrote poetry as did his son Solomon. We inherited a legacy of artistry and creation from our ancestors, a legacy that continues to flourish.

Judaism is so infused with art that we can assume it is essential for life. We see art in our prayerbooks, haggadot, bibles, and in the "performance" of worship itself; we see art in our buildings and in our ritual items; we experience art in the telling of our stories and our understanding of the world and so much more.

For many of us, whether creating or experiencing the creations of others, multiple forms of artistic expression have enhanced our lives and often connected us to the Divine. Just like being in Israel, words are inadequate to describe what happens when we are moved by art.

If you haven't already, I invite you to find the genre of art that speaks to your soul, whether it is considered "Jewish" art or not. (Who knows how to define "Jewish" art anyway?!) Find the time to either benefit from other people's creations or learn to create yourself. If you have already discovered your love for art, ensure that you are still making time to experience it.

"There are halls in heaven that are open only to the voice of song." – Zohar
There are halls in heaven that are open only through the experience of art.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

PINK MESSAGES

A friend of mine (and you KNOW who you are!) recently sent me an article about The Kraft Group/Kraft Family Philanthropies which includes the non-profit organizations Foundation to Combat Anti-Semitism and Together Beat Hate. The piece was interesting because it made me aware of something I didn't know. Apparently, there are bright pink billboards bringing awareness to antisemitism all over the greater Boston area. A group called JewBelong, specifically Archie Gottesman and Stacy Stuart, has partnered with the Kraft Group and designed these billboards, and there are six of them. They can be seen in Peabody, Everett, Chelsea, and Brockton, and I guess you can't miss them. After all, they are neon pink. I need to take a drive.

The reason I say "interesting" is that, as Jews, we never seem to be very vocal about antisemitism... or am I missing something. One of the signature slogans of the group is, "We don't care which half of you is Jewish." I don't recall any time where we as Jews have marched down the street with banners proclaiming our displeasure at being mistreated. Maybe it's the sinisterism of antisemitism that scares us. Too much attention? No courage? I don't have an answer. All I know is, being quiet doesn't make it go away.

One of the messages on these billboards is, "You didn't like it when we didn't defend ourselves. And you don't like it when we do. Doesn't leave much wiggle room." This is a very strong statement! I think that because these billboards will catch people's attention and surprise them, there may be more awareness, and...please...more talk about this issue!

I, for one, am very proud to be a Jew. I am many things, but being a Jew is a very large part of me. I think we should show our pride. Judaism is not just about fighting antisemitism, as the article goes on to say. It's a community, a family, and it's a joy! Judaism is the fabric of our make-up. "I promise to love being Jewish 10x more than anyone hates me for it." Now there's a definite statement.

Also, as I write this, I realize that Purim and Passover will fall within the months of when this Bulletin comes out. We can definitely take pride in our Judaism! My family and I wish you all, most sincerely and with love, a time filled with joy and connecting with your family and friends. This season only means that Spring is coming! Now THAT makes me feel really good!

L'Shalom,
Paula Selvitella, President

RELIGIOUS SCHOOL AND YOUTH NEWS

Shalom from the Religious School!

January and February were very busy months at our Religious School! Although we moved to remote learning for a little while, our students were able to learn and grow. In January they learned about Tu B'shevat which is a Jewish Arbor Day celebrated all over the world, especially in Israel, and celebrated it with an amazing Tu B'Shevat Seder. I want to thank Yael Savage and Margot Barnet from the Social Action committee for planning and running this great Tu B'Shevat program. In February our students started to learn about the Holiday of Purim with special activities in their classes. We are looking forward to our special Purim talent show/ celebration on Wednesday, 3/16.

Part of the story of Purim is about courage. To be courageous and brave and to know that during times of challenge we can rise up. How can we have courage during this difficult time in history, how can we work and play together and ensure we stay strong as a community? What can we do to make sure we continue to thrive amidst very difficult times? We need to ensure we have courage and stay together and support one another. We need to ensure that we stay connected, supportive and share in the celebrations and traditions together. I am very proud that each teacher has continued to work hard to keep our children and our learning community strong throughout this year.

Our grade 7 students led an amazing Friday night service on February 11th. The children worked very hard, practiced their parts and songs, and wrote beautiful personal prayers. It was such a great feeling to see them leading the service for our congregation.

We are looking forward to the Spring and the warmer weather!

Talia

THE STORY OF THE STORY: HISTORY, ART, AND CULTURE OF THE HAGGADAH

Wednesdays, 7:30 pm, March 30, April 6, 13, 27

In-person and on Zoom

Join Rabbi Valerie Cohen for a 4-session series on the history of the Haggadah. Although we can find basic elements of our Seder service in the Mishnah (redacted around 200 C.E.), the “modern” text of the Haggadah developed in the Middle Ages. The Haggadah we use now would look completely foreign to ancient Jews. In this series, we will discuss the development of the Haggadah and how it changed, its theology and authorship. We will also look at the art, music and other culture that is integrated in a variety of Haggadot throughout the ages as well as in the Seder service.

As a bonus, our Walls to Bridges/Racial Justice Alliance will offer a session:

Wait, What? Were You and I Really Slaves in Egypt:
Incorporating Racial Justice Themes into Your Passover Seder

Saturday, April 9 (Time TBD)

See page 8 for a detailed description

WALLS TO BRIDGES/RACIAL JUSTICE ALLIANCE

Wait, What? Were You and I Really Slaves in Egypt?
Incorporating Racial Justice Themes into Your Passover Seder
Saturday, April 9, 2022

When we recite the words of the Haggadah in our Passover seders each year, we read that in every generation we must tell the story as if we ourselves had been liberated from slavery in Egypt. Does this ring true for us? What do these words mean for us today? What forces today press down on people like Pharaoh did upon our ancestors long ago? Can we be God's partners in bringing about liberation? How? Who might also be our partners? What plagues do we face today?

TES Racial Justice Alliance is offering an interactive workshop on Saturday, April 9 to help congregants enliven our seders with discussions of these and other burning questions. We'll share experiences and point to resources that can help you produce your own Haggadah, add readings to your favorite one, or find discussion starter questions. Some of us who have used such resources for years have found that they added meaning and depth to our seders, and have helped us think about action steps for justice that we might take in the world around us.

This workshop will serve as a bonus for anyone who joins Rabbi Valerie's class about the history of the Haggadah (see page --) or can stand alone. Let all who are hungry for such discussion come and share it with us! Stay tuned for more details in your E-News.
